

HUNGRY FOR CHANGE

On Friday 11 December 2015, a groundswell of emerging young thinkers, leaders, and innovators from diverse backgrounds and regions, will gather at the Melbourne Convention and Exhibition Centre to discuss and digest our future.

f21y is an unprecedented free event where 1000+ young minds will learn how to create social change from established global leaders, social entrepreneurs, and media personalities - towards a future that is bright, healthy, and sustainable.

An international cast of speakers will share their experiences and stories of change, posing questions to ignite conversations around some of the biggest collective challenges of the 21st century.

Young Victorians know the future that they want. They are more connected, informed, and empowered than ever before. The hunger for social change is palpable, yet the path to effective and timely action remains unclear.

The first step toward a better future starts with a conversation.

Held on the final day of COP-21 - the United Nations climate conference in Paris - we believe now is the perfect time to equip young Victorians with the confidence, tools, and inspiration needed to start these critical conversations.

- WHEN: Friday 11 December 2015, 12pm - 5pm
- WHERE: The Plenary, Melbourne Convention and Exhibition Centre
- WHO: Open to all young people from across Victoria, aged 16-30
- WHAT: A FREE event for emerging thinkers, leaders and innovators. Speakers include Alex Dyson, Simon Griffiths, Kevin Sheedy, Katy Barfield, David Prior and Simon McKeon.
